

Binn

On the west entrance of the village called Schmidigehischere, first time mentioned in 1437 as Schmidingerro husren, the main street divides into three streets.
The first street goes over the bridge to Giessen and Imfeld, the second slightly downhill to the parking lot built in 1973. The third road goes into the village. If you follow this road you get only after a few steps already to the Ze Stadle which belongs to the most impressive old district of commercial houses in the region Untergoms . It consists of a Hay stable and a imposing barn for the Binntal characteristic with pillars without the round stone plates. The place before the post office is surrounded from dark browned houses nicely decorated with flowers. From all the carved religious and pious dictums on the houses we mention here only one which was carved on the Post Office in 1914:
A little boat is like a humans heart with all the lust and pain it navigates without stopping or resting to the land of the hope if you forgive your enemies you get eternal life if you deny peace you get eternal harm.
In the white building where used to be the alpine dairy are now the mayor office and a bank
The bridge in Binn is built in 1564.

Wileren

This hamlet with the church, a religious point of the valley, extends up on a hillside, secured from avalanches, from where the little river "Rickenbach" flows into the "Binna" river. The top house here has been built before 1500, its called a "Heidehüs". Of all such houses you will find only one more which is in "Ze Binne". The only stone house a "Klebmauerhaus" was built in 1669 by order of the Binner Father Petrus Karlen. The church of the holy arch angel Michael was built between 1561-1565. They used parts of the old church from 1300. From that time there is a fresque which shows Nikopoia
